Addressing Underreported Incidents and Legal Settlements

In recent years, the corporate world has witnessed a notable surge in legal settlements concerning compliance issues. While this might suggest an increased attention towards regulation and compliance, it ironically underscores another critical concern: the number of reported incidents remains strikingly small.

There's a growing need to break down barriers and change our approach towards compliance. Various factors contribute to this issue:

- ✖ Streamlining reporting requirements to ensure clarity and ease, thus promoting incident reporting.
- ✖ Simplifying compliance processes to encourage active participation and facilitate seamless operation.
- ✖ Addressing personnel shortage to bolster compliance handling and encourage timely reporting.
